BUSINESS: Intel Corp. is a leading manufacturer of integrated circuits. Markets served: primarily makers of personal computers; also communications, industrial automation, military, and other electronic equipment. Main products: microprocessors (notably, the Pentium series), microcontrollers, and memory chips. Also sells computer modules and boards, and network products. Foreign business: about 82% of '14 sales. R&D: 21% of sales. '14 dep. rate: 9.3%. Has 106,700 employees. Off./dir. own less than 1% of common shares; BlackRock, 6.0%; The Vanguard Group, 5.5% (4/15 proxy). Chair.: Andy Bryant. Pres.: Renee James. CEO: Brian Krzanich. Incorp.: DE. Add.: 2200 Mission College Blvd., Santa Clara, CA 95054. Tele.: 408-765-8080. Internet: www.intc.com.

Intel reported mixed results during the September quarter. Revenues were $14.465 billion, which was above our estimate of $14.240 billion, while share net came in a nickel better than we had thought. On the plus side, Data Center Group comparisons climbed 12% relative to 2014, while the Internet of Things division gained 10% on a year-over-year basis. Meantime, Software and Services revenues were roughly flat, while Client Computing Group comparisons fell 7% from 2014's like period.

We believe the December period was roughly as management anticipated. The top line probably clocked in at $14.8 billion (on par with the midpoint of company guidance), while the gross margin was likely in the neighborhood of 62%. This would equate to a bottom-line tally of about $0.65 a share. One area that was of particular concern was the Server segment. During the September-quarter conference call, management noted that reduced demand on the corporate side of the ledger hindered results in that segment during the fourth quarter. Indeed, many corporations are outsourcing more of their technology requirements overseas and, therefore, don't need as many servers. However, after a difficult 2015, management believes this segment will rebound 15% or so in 2016.

The chip behemoth's bottom line ought to bounce back in the year just begun, though we believe gains will be moderate. Our growth assumptions are based on a decent global economy.

Acquisitions are likely to remain a part of the company's long-term growth strategy. We feel this is necessary for Intel's long-term success, as its bread-and-butter Personal Computer division is mature and has diminishing growth potential, given the resounding popularity of tablets, smartphones, and laptops, among other portable devices. Last year, the company inked a $16.7 billion deal to buy Altera, which is likely to close in the first quarter of 2016.

Intel stock's Timeliness rank has inched up a notch to 3, Average. Total return prospects 3 to 5 years hence are solid on a risk-adjusted basis, too. A recent dividend increase sweetens the pot.
